- Flexible. You will only be scheduled to work when you state you are available.
- During busy season (usually March-October and Christmas/New Years), guide availability is collected a head of time and guides are put on call for certain days and assigned to tours as reservations come in. Scheduling is normally done monthly.
- Actual work assignments may not be made until close of business the day prior to the work day. If not enough work comes in on a given day, you will be released with trip cancel pay.
- The more you are available, the more work you'll get. The fewer time restrictions on a given day that you have, the more likely you will be scheduled.
- Guides may be scheduled for two kayak trips in a given day if they are available and want the extra work. Work hours per regular kayak trips range from 3 to 4.5 hours. Private trips with lunch or dinner range from 5.5 to 6.5 hours for lead guide on the tour.
- During slow season, available work is put out to guides via email notice as reservations come in. Usually first guide to want the work gets it.

- Part I – Paperwork, docks protocol, on water training w/John to include route review and capsize rescue with John as victim.

Focus on shadow trips is on watching customer service skills, guest interaction, interpretive work, and boat clean-up. Local naturalists with strong kayak skills may only need one shadow trip before being scheduled as a regular guide. Other people may need more. You can shadow as many trips as you want.
- Paid at hourly rate for Part I and for as many shadow trips as are deemed necessary by the owner (usually 1-3). Additional shadow trips are unpaid.
